EVERY FAMILY SHOULD DO WHEN GIVEN A DIAGNOSIS OF DEMENTIA

An estimated 55 million people around the world are living with dementia. While Alzheimer's disease is the leading cause, there are other conditions that can lead to memory loss.

For most, receiving a diagnosis of dementia can be a frightening time for individuals and their families, but with the help of the WAM at Cleveland Clinic community and our experts, we've come up with a new 10 Things Guide that we hope can help reduce fear and set families and their loved ones up for a safe, active, and meaningful future.
